AMERICAN UNION OF ASSOCIATIONISTS.

This Society, of which the Philadelphia Union is an auxiliary, was formed on the 27th of May, 1846. Previous to this organization the efforts of Associationists had been altogether desultory. Though the cause ranked among its supporters men of high attainments and varied talents, and though these were remarkable for the zeal which they displayed in the diffusion of Social Science and the patient endurance they manifested amid the trials of premature efforts at realization, yet no system of operation characterized their labors. Acting in the belief that one successful movement practically demonstrative of the truths of Association would be all sufficient to insure the general prevalence of the new or Combined Order of Society, the pioneers of the cause are not to be censured for a neglect of the systematic propagation of abstract truth.

It soon became evident, however, that the cause was growing languid from imperfect respiration. While its pioneers were struggling for the establishment of Model Phalanxes, they were unavoidably neglecting the true preliminary step of extensive and systematic propagandism, or in other words the provision of a pure and bracing atmosphere of sympathy and co-operation. Reason and experience now united in recommending the formation of a National organization, as a centre for all the associative effort of the country. This resulted in the establishment of the AMERICAN UNION OF ASSOCIA-

TIONISTS, whose objects and organization differ from those of Local Unions only so far as they fill a more universal sphere.

This body assemble annually during Anniversary Week in the City of New York, whilst its Executive Committee meets as occasion may require.

The following is a List of its Officers, who together form the Executive Committee:

PRESIDENT. Horace Greeley, New York.

VICE-PRESIDENTS. [The Presidents of all Affiliated Unions are ex-officio Vice-Presidents of the American Union, and Members of its Executive Committee.]
